

Contents

Preface	xi
Introduction	1
1 Conceptualizing Democracy as the Idea of the Political Empowerment of the Citizen	11
Democracy as the Political Sovereignty and Social Autonomy of the Citizen
Moral Foundations of the Conception of Democracy as the Political Empowerment of the Citizen
A Democratic Conception of the Individual
A Democratic Conception of Society
The Individual Acting as the Sovereign
The Individual Acting Autonomously
Concluding Remarks
2 A Different Kind of Collective Decision-Making Scheme	49
A Different Kind of Voting System
The Problem of Knowledgeable and Competent Voters
The Problem of “Irresponsible,” “Ideological,” and “Strategic” Voting
The Problem of the Manipulation of the Voting Agenda
The Problem of Revealing the Wills of the Voters “Truly”
Arrow’s Impossibility Theorem
Concluding Remarks

3	A Realistic Democratic Utopia	99
	The Idea of “ e -Democracy”
	Institutional Arrangements of a Realistic Democratic Utopia
	Citizens’ Participation in the Realistic Democratic Utopia
	Concluding Remarks
4	The Theory of Direct-Deliberative e -Democracy	131
	Direct-Deliberative e -Democracy and Liberal Democracy
	Direct-Deliberative e -Democracy and Theories of Participatory and Deliberative Democracy
	Equality and the Question of Property Relations
	The “Guardians of the Public Interests” and the Question of the Quality of Voting Outcomes
	Justifying Direct Democracy
	The Public Political Culture and Civil Society
	The Question of Technology
	Concluding Remarks
	Conclusion	187
	Selected Bibliography	205
	Index	225
	About the Author	239